Tribute from Marilyn Hahn

Relation: She is my aunt.

Auntie Alma and I took an 8-hour (altogether) drive together a few years back - and I was mortified in the days before thinking, "What on earth are we going to talk about for all that time?!" Well, we gabbed from the second I popped the car into "Drive" to the second the car went onto "Park". I found her refreshingly honest-but-kind in each breath of love released. She was safe. She was empathetic. She could laugh out loud in agreement ... then mutter under her breath at something she didn't agree with - and then smile. She shared her wisdom as a friend; she shed a tear as a confidante. Auntie Alma felt like Home to me, and that made me ugly-cry, but she reached out and hugged me - and that made me hopeful. She was small in stature but ginormous in spirit; she sat tiny in the passenger's seat but filled the entire car with Faith and Understanding, and a Genuineness and Authenticity so hard to find these days. She was someone who could hear the pain but could also hold any necessary mercies. She was indeed filled with Holy Spirit. A truly spiritual person. There wasn't a smack of religiosity or insufferableness in her, and the world surely found that life-giving. She is a Woman of God indeed... I love You. I miss You... There's a huge space in the world where your body once loved...
