Lorraine, Trevor, John, Meagan (Ethan, Makayla, Emma) and Beverly, when I was told what happened the memories of Darren came rushing to me, there are too many to count. I feel like I have to share one of them. Over 30 years ago him and I found ourselves together at the same babysitters, we spent countless mornings and afternoons together waiting for our parents to pick us up after work. One of those afternoons we decided we wanted to see what it would be like to parachute out of the fort the babysitter had in the back yard, at 6-7 years old it seemed like miles up in the tree. We grabbed the closest thing to a parachute there was available, 2 Safeway plastic bags. Obviously this did not turn out well, we both jumped from the treehouse and dropped like a brick to the ground (laughing) but we proved to ourselves that it couldn't be done with trash bags. I am constantly reminded of this story due to my 7 year old son who always asks me if i think he should jump off something (usually it's pretty high) I tell him this story (I've told it to many others). The more I think about it the stories add up, like the time we were chosen out of the whole school to bring our science fair project to the mall "Electrifying Electricity", we won 1st place, one year we decided to dress up as the rap group Kris Kross (jeans, baseball jersey and hat all backwards), we thought we were pretty cool. I can remember the musical influence he had on me, if he was into it I was into it, when Nirvana unplugged came on MTV he watched it with his eyes glued to the tv, I can remember the look on his face. I could go on.....I will always remember Darren as one of my closest friends no matter what direction we went after high school. The closeness our group had coming up from kindergarten to high school grad is rare, I'll cherish it forever.

Bryce
